

If God predestinated everything to happen, then why even pray for something to happen?